Biographical/Historical Note: June Moffett began collecting obituaries from the Lufkin Daily News in 2000 and compiled a name index for each year. The Lufkin Daily News was the first daily newspaper in Lufkin, Texas. Originally founded by Charles L. Schless and published by Texas Newspapers, Incorporated and G.E. Watford in 1906. Under new management, it was renamed Lufkin News in 1959. In 1977, the paper received a Pulitzer Prize Public Service Award for the series of articles concerning the death of a local Marine while in training camp. The story led to a congressional investigation of the training practices and recruitment of Marines and eventually a reform. In 1982, the paper resumed publication under the name the Lufkin Daily News and is still active in the area to this day. The newspaper's primary coverage area is Angelina County, Texas which has a population of about 80,000 people. The paper became a member of the Southern Newspapers Incorporated family in 2009, when the Houston-based community newspapers company purchased the daily newspapers in Lufkin and Nacogdoches.
