Coral Killed In Bedroom of Home

A medium-sized snake believed to be the deadly coral snake, was killed by Mrs. W. J. Bearden in the bedroom of her home in the Watson Walker Addition early this week.

Mrs. Bearden's son had left the water running in the bathroom and she went to investigate. Passing through one of the bedrooms when she entered was the deadly reptile. She killed it with a hoe. The snake did not attempt to bite her, she said.

The coral is known for its lethargic movement and seems to always withhold its lethal bite except when attacked or harmed.

Another coral snake was seen by Darwin Kerr in the Pinedale Addition last week. The snake worked itself into a brush hole before Kerr could get something to kill it with, however. Kerr said he wasn't sure the snake was of the coral variety.

Lufkin Gets Special Association Meet For Next Year

The 1959 convention of North and East Texas County Judges and Commissioners Association will be held in Lufkin next May, County Judge Eddie McFarland has announced.

Invitation was extended to the group last week in Paris, Texas, meeting by Judge McFarland and local commissioners, backed by the chamber of commerce and the goodwill committee.

The convention will bring some 400 people to Lufkin for the meeting.

Fenley Helps In Road Death Case

By BETH DURHAM

Constable Dan Fenley last week was instrumental in the apprehension of a 28-year-old Houston ex-convict who later waived examining trial on three charges. The charges were murder with a motor vehicle, hit and run and car theft.

The man, Basil Montgomery, was apprehended in Houston late last Thursday after reportedly ramming the rear end of a pickup driven by Ira Black of Pollock, causing the latter's death.

Montgomery's car apparently pushed Mr. Black's pickup into the path of a pulpwood truck last Thursday morning at about 6 a.m., at a location one and a half miles north of Diboll.

Montgomery, who left the scene of the accident before officers arrived, admitted in a

Dark Tuesday

Last week the Lufkin City Council met to consider the proposals of three applicants for a franchise to build and operate a community antenna TV system in Lufkin.

The first proposal was presented by a Tyler, Texas owned corporation styled Lufkin TV Cable Company made up entirely of out-of-town investors.

The second proposal came from Lufkin Vu-More, a hastily organized corporation owned 50% by an out-of-state company, and 50% by KTRE-TV which is itself owned partly by out-of-town people and partly by Lufkin interests.

The third proposal came from KSPL representing a group of Lufkin people.

The proposals of the first and third groups were rejected and the franchise was granted to the group owned 50% by out-of-state interests and 50% by KTRE-TV.

On the granting of such a franchise it is natural to assume that the terms of the accepted proposal were more favorable than the others to

1. The City of Lufkin or
2. The subscribers to the new service

In this instance, however, neither is the case.

The proposal offered by KSPL assured the City of Lufkin a 50% higher franchise tax than that offered by the group for whom KTRE was fronting.

The proposal originally offered by KTRE would actually have cost each subscriber to the community antenna TV system $29.40 a year more than it would under the KSPL proposal.

Even after the Lufkin City Council forced Vu-More to lower its proposed rate, it still will cost each subscriber $16.40 more each year than under the KSPL proposal.

Why did the Lufkin City Council act against the best interests of the City of Lufkin and against the best interest of future subscribers?

According to our reporter the award of the franchise was not made on the merits of the applications themselves.

As a matter of fact, the attorneys for the successful applicant based their entire plea on another argument. It was necessary to grant the franchise to Vu-More to help support one of its owners, KTRE-TV.

It was argued that KTRE-TV, "free" television beamed to the Lufkin region, had lost money during its two years of operation and was in danger of being lost to the community unless the Council granted its 50% subsidiary the franchise on a less favorable basis than that offered by the Lufkin group.

It also implied that the application of the Lufkin group should be denied because it entered the competition late.

The members of the Lufkin City Council are honorable men of proven ability. There can be no doubt that they reached their decision with the best of intentions.

We believe also that as wise and honorable men they will want to review and reconsider their decision now that they have had time to reflect on it.

We believe that the Lufkin City Council acting in behalf of all the citizens of Lufkin will want to reconsider the following assumptions which were apparently the basis for its decision:

1. Should the Lufkin group be disqualified because its application was made later than the others?

We say NO. KSPL's application was prepared by the outstanding radio-TV consulting engineer in the Southwest and was well-founded on technical facts beyond the challenge of members of the Council. We say NO because KSPL has proven itself in the broadcasting field, successful and profitable beyond the need of public subsidy. We say NO, for such reasoning is invalid on the face of it when it is considered that the applicant half owned by KTRE was hastily organized after the Tyler group had applied.

2. Should the franchise be granted to the applicant who pleads that it needs its revenue to keep alive an unsuccessful radio-TV corporation? We say NO. We say that it is not the part of government to subsidize by favorable grants unsuccessful, privately-owned profit enterprises. We say NO. When a privately owned profit enterprise pleads that its object is "philanthropy," it should not call upon the public to underwrite its "philanthropy" by a form of taxation or by discriminatory franchises. We say NO. We deny the "philanthropy" of a TV corporation which requires paying sponsors for Easter services and so called public service programs.

We say NO. The threat to close KTRE-TV has never been supported by any bona fide proof that other management could not make it successful. At no time has it been shown that KTRE-TV might not be sold to advantage to interests of proven success in the broadcasting field.

Fortunately, it is not too late.

It is within the full power of the Lufkin City Council to reopen its hearing for further consideration.

We prefer to believe that the representatives of Vu-More, themselves honorable men, would prefer to lose the franchise than to receive it on a pretext which the citizens of Lufkin disapprove.

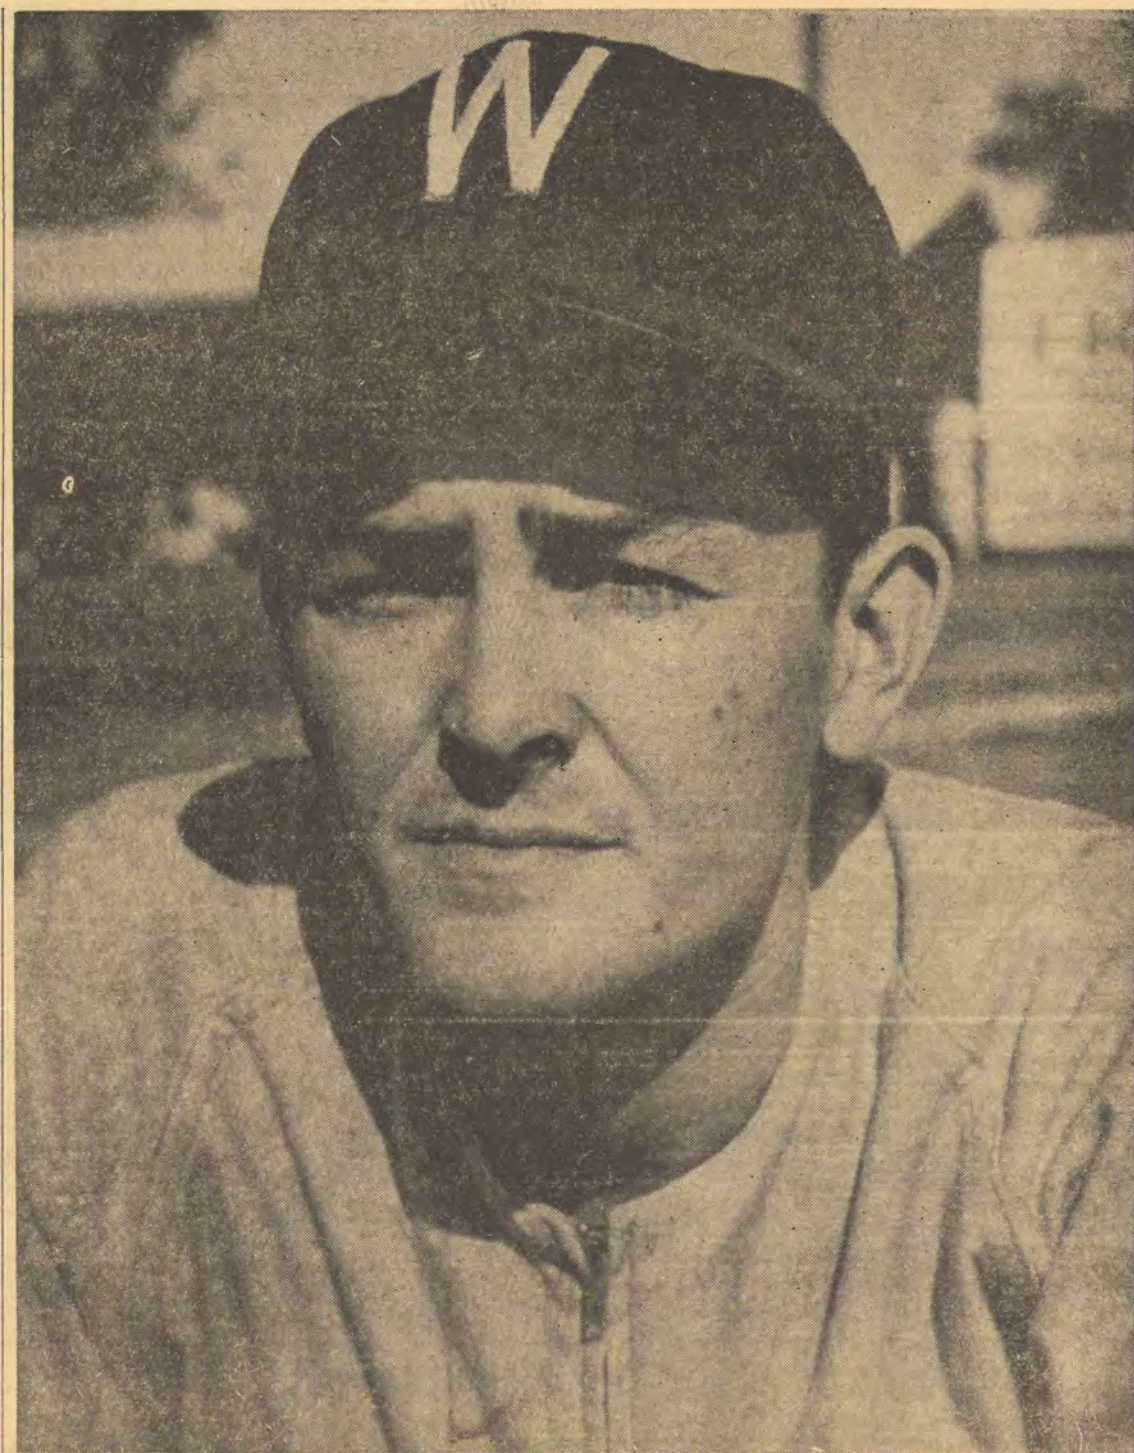

And on reconsideration, we believe the City Council will grant the franchise to the applicant who is competent to offer the best service (KSPL has offered whichever service is indicated to be best by comprehensive engineering tests. Direct micro-wave or multiple relay micro-wave)

Will offer community antenna TV at the lowest cost to subscribers

Will return the best revenue to the City of Lufkin.

In the interest of sound government everywhere, we certainly hope so.

Runnels Rooting For All Kids In League Circuits

By PAUL M. DURHAM, Editor

Does your boy have a chance of becoming a major league ball player?

He sure does!

One of the first to agree with this statement would be James E. (Pete) Runnels, hard-hitting first baseman for the Boston Red Sox of the American League.

$140,000 Leaves In Money Orders Says Postmaster Hines

Slightly more than $140,000 left Diboll during the first three months of 1958 in the form of money orders, says Postmaster B. F. Hines this week.

"More than $47,000 in money orders were issued each month of the first quarter," Hines said.

The local Post Office has listed advances in regular receipts of from 20 to 80 percent during the past year. This has caused the Post Office Dept. to advertise for larger space for the local office.

Pete, who was whacking the horsehide at a glittering .357 clip at this writing, is a graduate of many sandlot baseball games prior to his brilliant high school and college career.

Little League Program had not become a reality when Pete was in his youth, but it's a safe bet that the fast-rising star would have given a lot for the vast knowledge that is now available to boys on the diamond almost from the time they enter school.

Pete Runnels of course played a world of baseball before he reached the big time circuit. A standout in baseball, football and basketball at Lufkin High School, Pete moved on to learn more about the game at Rice University in Houston. He left there in 1948 to sign a professional contract with Henderson in the old East Texas League. After a brief stint with Henderson and Texarkana, Pete moved on to the American Association and finally to his first major league assignment with the Washington Senators.

We all remember that first 1956 season of Pete's when he sported a nifty .310 batting average, while playing at nearly every infield and outfield position.

Pete dropped to a .247 mark last year, but after his trade to the Red Sox this season he has grown to the challenge by drawing himself to the regular starting roster at first base.

Each year, at opening ceremonies of the combined Little League-Pony League here in Diboll, baseballs are thrown out to the two clubs. The two boys

Opening Of Pony League Changed

Weather permitting, Arthur Temple Jr. was scheduled to throw out the first two official baseballs to herald the opening of the 1958 Little League season in Diboll Tuesday night.

League president Dan Fenley said Monday, however, that opening of the Pony League has been reset for next Tuesday night, May 20. The change was made so that teams from Corrigan and Camden can participate. Diboll will sponsor only two Pony teams this year, due to a shortage in players.

Pony League players from here will participate in the Tuesday opening this week, however.

Baseballs caught by boys from the two leagues will be sent to Pete Runnels of the Boston Red Sox, who will see that they are autographed by various American and National League stars.

Fenley said Monday that no opening date has been set for the local Pony Graduate team, which will compete in the Lufkin circuit.

Next week's News-Bulletin will contain a picture-story of the Little League opening held this week. Fenley said the opening would be held tomorrow night (Friday) in case of a rainout Tuesday night.

STOVALL CREEK PHILOSOPHER

Wants Scientists To Turn Efforts To Leaky Faucets, Dent-Proof Cars

Editor's note: The Stovall Creek Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm on Stovall Creek assigns the scientific mind some old problems, his letter this week reveals.

Dear editor:

I know everybody is supposed to be concentrating all his efforts these days on keeping up with Russia in guided missiles and space exploration, but the way I see it is, even if we make a landing on the moon and open up a lot more plants for occupation, somebody is going to have to stay on this earth, and I've been thinking.

We don't want to get so busy we neglect life around here, and I would like to propose a few problems for the scientific minds to tackle.

For example, up to now, the scientific mind, with all its vast accomplishments, has never been able to permanently stop a leaky faucet. They can stop one from leaking temporarily, but sooner or later, it'll start leaking again. What I'd like to propose to the world of science is a rubber washer that'll last a lifetime, or else throw out the whole washer idea and invent a hydrant that works without one.

Also, while I have given up expecting the automobile industry to build a car that'll last a lifetime, if I was in the business I wouldn't be interested either, you don't catch me urging anybody to invent a cow that'll supply meat to one family forever, still I would like to see the scientific mind perfect a tail pipe that will last at least four years, certainly longer than one or two.

Another thing the scientific mind ought to be turning its attention to is a wrinkle-proof car fender. If they can do it with shirts and pants, why can't they do it with car fenders?

I could go listing a lot of other things, but you are as familiar with them as I am. I'm in favor of the schools turning out more scientists, but not just scientists to work on satellites and guided missiles. What we need is a great body of scientific brains tackling the every-day problems.

I still contend there's nothing

Safe Fun For Boys

A boy's first pocket knife can be as important an event as his first pair of long pants. And when Dad introduces him to its many uses, a whole new area of father-and-son companionship opens.

Hunting with Dad? Make the shavings that will kindle the campfire. Fishing? Clean the scales and split the filets. Building a model plane? Cut out the parts with precision—and save those steak knives. New clothesline to be rigged? Trim it to size for Mom.

When you give your son his first pocket knife, advises Harry B. Hazelton, Sales Manager of Imperial Knife Associated Companies, Inc., give him a safety course, too. Teach him to: pull out only the blade he wants to use; wipe blades clean after using; oil the knife's joints; keep it out of the ground; sharpen it on an oiled stone, with a whittling motion, away from himself.

more ridiculous than a space scientist, just after launching a new satellite, having to come home to a leaky faucet and a bill for straightening out a car fender his wife has just dented because somebody apparently narrowed the garage door during the night.

Yours faithfully,

J. A.

Pit Stops

By Johnny Boyd

VETERAN INDIANAPOLIS DRIVER

Well the first of the year is just around the corner; now before you get ready to call the little man with the butterfly net, let me tell you that the new year starts on May 1st for a race driver that's entered in the "500" at Indianapolis.

After the winter months, with maybe a midget race or two, I start working out in the gym here in Fresno to get in top shape for the "500". I know that many people don't classify a race driver as an athlete, but I'm here to tell you that we have to be in shape just the same as a ball player if we expect to last through a gruelling five hundred miles of hard racing.

GOOD ARMS, WRISTS

In fact, that applies to the other races across the country also. Sitting down may not seem to be too demanding, but it takes good arms and wrists plus a lot of stamina to whip 1600 pounds of race car at speeds up to 165-170 mph.

Conditioning plays a big part in the life of a good race driver, so anyone with eyes on Victory Lane next May 30th had better be in shape.

THE "BIG ONE"

Indianapolis is the race that counts the most no matter how you figure whether it be money, prestige, or the thrill of running in the "big one".

It's a little hard to explain the feeling a driver gets when he hits the Speedway gates every year along the latter part of April or the first of May. In many ways you feel like you've come home after a long trip and boy does it feel good to be back.

You see many faces you haven't seen for five months and some you haven't seen since the last "500". A barrage of questions fired all at once as you gather in groups of four or five seem to charge the air with something that a person just can't explain unless he's there.

I PICK 'EM

After you shake loose from the various groups, you take your first swing down the four rows of garages to see what cars are in and how they look.

You go from garage to garage and make a mental note of the cars; the ones you think will make the race, the ones on the border line, and the ones you just can't see in the starting field no matter who drives.

After you return to your own garage, you know in some cases you were wrong just as sure as you know the sun will rise the next day. Every year a few cars fail to make the race that you were sure would have no trouble at all, and every year a few make the race even though you still don't understand how.

GOOD OLD NO. 9

I recently heard from the United States Auto Club, the body that sanctions the "500" and the other National Championship Events, that I'll be allowed to carry number 9 on my Poyes "Seal Fast" special this year.

I actually placed eighth in the 1957 standings but I'm just a little funny about that number. I've been upside down in a race car eight times since I started in 1946 and four of the eight times I was carrying #8 on my car.

I'm not going to say that I'm superstitious, but I'm just not taking any chances — the same goes for the color green, peanuts, and women around the car before the start of the race.

Understand now that I don't say I believe all this, let's just say that Johnny likes to go along with the group and not be an individualist in this case.

A REPEAT?

Getting back to the number 9, it was on the winning car last year — the one driven to victory by Sam Hanks. Sam has retired from the sport so I'm all in favor of the number repeating in 1958.

You know Sam plugged away for twelve years before he won the "500" and he was one of the best. It's easy to see that it takes a lot of breaks to bring home a winner at Indianapolis. Well, I guess this will just about cover the thoughts from Fresno for now. Before I head for the gym, let me wish you all a happy racing year!

STATE CAPITAL Highlights AND Sidelights

By Vern Sanford

TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

By VERN SANFORD

Texas Press Association AUSTIN, Tex.—Leaders of the Texas cotton farming industry, long plagued by regional feuding, have joined hands. Object: to try to stave off a drastic cut in the 1958 acreage allotments.

Unless the present farm law is amended by Congress this session, the national cotton acreage allotment would drop automatically from the presently authorized national quota of 17,500,000 acres to approximately 14,200,000 acres in 1959.

Spokesmen from all the state's cotton producing areas met in Austin to hammer out an alternate proposal. Their plan:

- (1) Retain the 17,500,000 national acreage allotment.
- (2) Give farmers a choice between planting higher acreage at lower price supports or lower acreage with higher supports.
- (3) Abolish the present Soil Bank program.

It was the first time, said leaders that this Texas industry had been so well unified behind a program. In previous years, East and West Texas growers have been at loggerheads over quotas.

Texas cotton men say that they nor the economy as a whole can stand the threatened 20 to 25 percent slash.

Of the 17,500,000 acres now allotted to cotton over the nation, Texas has 7,474,000, giving the state a hefty stake in the future of the industry.

LOST OIL FORESEEN

If Texas continues to limit oil production to market demand, the state may lose permanently some of its underground oil resources.

Railroad Commission Chairman Olin Culberson told a group of some 600 Southwestern oil men that if present trends continue, development of secondary recovery programs will not be justified. In short, going after the last drop available from a pool is hardly worthwhile when production is stringently limited.

Culberson suggested to the Texas Petroleum Committee's Oil Recovery Conference that a new approach might be needed to conserve Texas' prime resource. Alternative, he said, might be the loss of well over half the oil under Texas.

AT GATESVILLE

(A distinguished Texas judge offers pointers on combating our rapidly increasing juvenile delinquency problem.)

By JUDGE SARAH T. HUGHES

JUDGE HUGHES

For many years whippings and solitary confinement were routine punishment at the state reformatory at Gatesville. We heard that sadistic guards punished the boys unmercifully.

Several years ago a drill-master jumped on a boy who refused to drill any longer and choked him. The boy died. Like Hardened Criminals

"The boys in this institution are subject to the same harsh and strenuous rules and regulations as you would expect to find in controlling the hardest criminal in the penitentiary," a legislative committee said about the Gatesville reformatory.

Despite the harsh treatment (which included 10-year-olds who were there because they were neglected but who were learning crime from the older, more serious offenders) there were gang fights, hunger strikes, and many escapes.

In 1952 a new policy was inaugurated. Today the whip is gone. Bars have been removed. Boys are punished by being deprived of privileges. There have been no gang fights or hunger strikes. Escapes have decreased.

Institutional Whippings Authorities believe that whippings in institutions often build up resentments that cause the boy to commit other offenses.

Those who have actually worked with teen-age offenders believe that institutions for delinquents should have treatment seeking the causes of delinquency, together with a program of education, rehabilitation and vocational training.

Solve Your Problems

Security Booklet Said Best Seller

Social Security is one of the most popular subjects in Uncle Sams "Library" of thousands of booklets and pamphlets offered for sale to the public. The Government Printing Office recently made a survey of these publications, covering a bewildering variety of subjects, and drew up a list of 10 long time best sellers. Included in this group of all-time favorites is a booklet entitled "Your Social Security."

L. R. James, District Manager of the Social Security Administration at Lufkin, commenting on the popularity of the booklet said that it is the best brief explanation of the social security program. "In 43 pages," he said, "it manages to give a concise picture of the old-age, survivors and disability insurance program. We have a number of other booklets dealing with special phases, but this is the one we rely on to give a good general understanding of the entire program."

The list of the ten best-selling booklets, with the number of copies sold from date of issuance, is as follows:

1. Infant Care, 10,823,652
2. Prenatal Care, 5,517,213
3. Your Child from One to Six, 4,549,896
4. Your Federal Income Tax, 3,480,002
5. Your Child from Six to Twelve, 1,755,626
6. Your Social Security, 1,195,729
7. Postage Stamps of the United States from 1847 to 1957, 1,009,195
8. Air Craft Power Plant Handbook, (CAA), 582,607
9. Pilot's Weather Handbook, (CAA), 568,126
10. Know Your Money, 407,200

Mr. James pointed out that the listing is not entirely a fair measure of present popularity of the publications, since many of them are old-timers and have had a number of years in which to pile up sales. Booklets on social security are relatively new but are increasing in popularity.

"An indication of the interest people have in our program," Mr. James said, "is the quantity of booklets we have distributed free of charge, on request, as a public service. After the 1956 Amendments, for example, more than 4 million copies of 'Your Social Security' were distributed in 9 months time. The demand has been so heavy at times that the supply has been exhausted and we have had to make emergency orders for as many as a million copies at a time."

The booklet has been revised to bring it completely up to date and we have just received a supply of the new issue in the Lufkin office. We will be glad to send a copy, free of charge, to anyone who asks. Just write, telephone or call at the social security office and ask for "Your Social Security" (or booklet number 35)."

WASHINGTON—An effective coalition of Republicans and Southern Democrats believes it scored a notable victory in bringing about defeat of a House proposal to convert expanded unemployment compensation payments into a dole.

This coalition, frequently holding the balance of power back in the Truman Administration, gave the present House Democratic leadership one of its worst beatings in recent years.

Conservative hope that the coalition will continue to be effective. In the past it has been a bulwark of strength against radical New-Fair Deal Legislative proposals.

While the victory was outstanding, it nevertheless was in the nature of a negative triumph. The coalition members were delighted to defeat the dole, but it must be said that at least some of them were not at all happy with the House approved.

The battle now shifts to the Senate where a determined effort has been promised to obtain approval of the measure rejected by the House. The outlook is not yet clear.

In the House the coalition obtained approval, by a 223 to 165 vote, of an unemployment compensation amendment offered as a substitute for the "dole" advocated by Democratic leadership.

Then, as amended, the bill was passed by the House 370 to 17. Under the measure, the Federal Government would, in effect, lend funds to the states for the purpose of extending the duration of payments of state unemployment benefits. The extension, in each individual case, would amount to 50% of the benefits for which the individuals had previously been eligible.

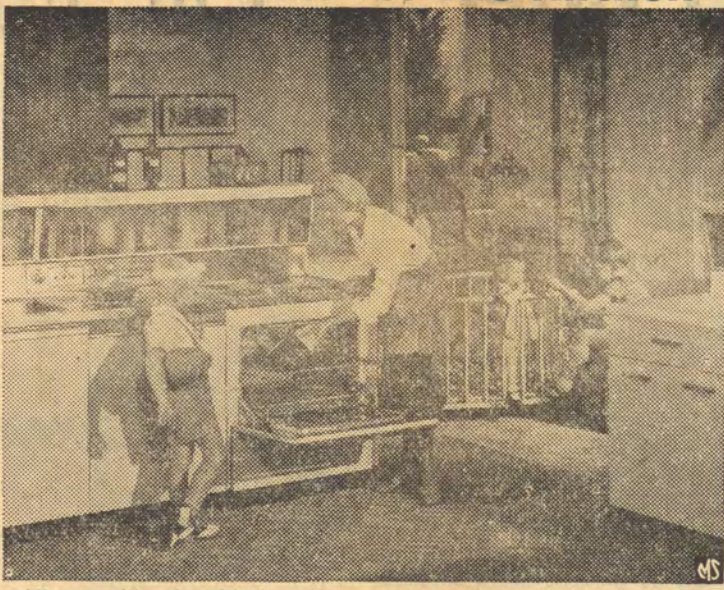

There is no element of compulsion of the states to borrow the money. It merely authorizes a Federal loan. Repayment would be expected. Funds would be available only to persons who had been covered by the unemployment compensation program.

Members of the coalition point out that legally the bill adds almost nothing to present law. If the state runs out of money it can borrow funds now from the Federal Government.

Actually, it is contended, the only thing that the House bill adds is authority for a state to borrow money before it needs—a situation not likely to be regarded realistically as an emergency.

However, from the standpoint of political expediency, the effect of the House bill likely would be to bring heavy pressure upon Governors to call special sessions of state legislatures and then, in turn, to bring perhaps irresistible pressure upon members of the state legislatures to extend the duration of benefits.

Counter Units For The Kitchen

The combination kitchen-dining area has become a familiar feature in American living quarters today. Extensively used in newer construction, it's seen everywhere from big city apartment dwellings to the neat, smaller homes of suburbia.

In effect, such an area is one room. But in actuality, it is used as two, so requires the same amounts of basic furnishings and fixtures as if there were two separate rooms. With some of the wall areas lacking, the installation of a full array of large major appliances in the relatively small kitchen section can often pose a space problem.

Ideal solution is provided by one of the clever free-standing counter units now on the market today. Attractively designed overall, these units combine several appliances under one convenient table-height cover. They can be affixed almost anywhere in the room—at the center, wholly or partly on one wall, or used as a room divider. Backs can be finished in a wide variety of materials in order to coordinate with the dining area decor. Other helpful features include extra shelf space and sweeping stainless steel counter tops that are a breeze to keep clean as well as reflective of the color scheme.

Under the stainless steel counter and sink shown above is a combination washer-dryer, dishwasher, garbage disposal unit, large oven and four-unit range. Only nine feet in length, this particular unit is by General Electric.

Pineland Election Authorizes Issuance Of Revenue Bonds

New sewer, gas, and waterworks for Pineland became a near-future reality Saturday

The question then would arise as to whether the extension of benefits voted by state legislatures would be temporary or permanent. History affords few illustrations of government benefits that are permitted to be temporary.

The Democratic bill provided for outright Federal gifts to the states to pay an additional 15 weeks of benefits. It also provided for paying the same benefits to persons out of work even though they had not been covered by the unemployment compensation system.

Objection to this part of the proposal was put graphically by Rep. Smith (D.Va.), Chairman of the House Rules Committee. He called it "pure, unadulterated, undisguised, unabridged and unabashed socialism."

Rep. Smith also pointed out that the proposed legislation "carefully refrains from any needs test. It does not make any difference whether you need the money or not."

Those eligible for unemployment payments, Rep. Smith said, would include:

Retired millionaires, thousands of retired people in the Armed Services "drawing their generous retirement pay," retired civil service employees who receive retirement pay, retired (voluntarily or involuntarily) members of Congress and unemployed men with wealthy wives.

John Dowdy's Newsletter

Dear Friends:

The foreign authorization bill for the next fiscal year will reach the House floor pretty soon. The President has asked Congress for approximately $4 billion new appropriation to add to about $7 billion heretofore appropriated and yet unspent.

In the past seventeen years the United States has given much more than $100 billion to every foreign country in the world.

Some nations in the world would resist communism to their death with their bare hands, and neither poverty nor threats would prevent them from doing so. There are other nations which would not resist, or would quit resisting when the going got rough, and neither weapons nor wealth would change them. Most of the time it is these normally weak nations that get our give-away money.

It doesn't make sense to pour out our billions for frivolous use. As long as we finance those nations with our gifts, they will never help themselves, and will reach the point where they can not help themselves, just as a person's muscles will be destroyed by unnecessary use of a crutch.

No country in history has ever become strong except through the work and struggles of its own people. Foreign aid discourages accomplishment, rather than creating it. The result is that we are surrounded with weaklings who become encumbrances to our progress, as well as to our defense.

I am opposed to squandering America's resources, and in times like these, it is unforgivable to do so. The money would be of much greater benefit to America and to Americans if it were retained and used at home.

Our visitors this week included Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Robinson and Mrs. John deRussey, of Huntsville, and Mr. and Mrs. Claude Browning of Athens.

Your Congressman,
JOHN DOWDY

ECONOMY STUDY

Along this line, an interim legislative committee is searching into higher education expenses. Sen. Crawford Martin of Hillsboro, chairman, said the study is directed toward achieving maximum efficiency and possible savings. Specifics to be considered: (1) how many college classes are below recommended size (2) how much public money is required to subsidize athletics and health services and (3) cost of college presidents' homes.

Little "D"

Word has come from Al Cudlipp Sr. that A. T. McDonough, long-time plant superintendent of Kirby Lumber Corporation in Silsbee, died of a heart attack in Beaumont last April 25.

Like Mr. Cudlipp, we had overlooked the obituary on the well-known lumberman. In a recent letter, Cudlipp said of Mr. McDonough: "Our profound sympathy goes out to the survivors of Mr. McDonough. He was a grand fellow, full of energy and enthusiasm and with a great sense of humor. His loss will be felt among the lumber fraternity for a long, long time."

Sooner or later something must be done about the reckless driving which takes place in and around Diboll. Speeding cars screech and squeal through our city's streets from late afternoon until late hours of night.

Several reports have reached us which say that young men and women are playing 'chicken' in automobiles on the old Diboll highway strip, in the south part of town. The game of 'chicken' involves racing from one end of the block to the other in dead of night with the lights turned out.

We have noticed, and I'm sure many of our readers have, that many of these youngsters drive so fast and reckless that they are a menace to pedestrians, children and fellow motorists. You may also have noticed as we have that some of them are children of some of our better known civic, business, and educational leaders. Although this makes the kids no better or worse than others, this is a plain indication that their fathers don't know about their antics in the automobile.

Personally, I haven't mentioned a single such case to any father . . . and I'll lay five-to-one odds that none of you have either. It's tough to walk up to a neighbor or pew-sharer and say: "Look old man, I don't want you to feel hard of me but I thought I'd let you know that son of yours is tearing up our streets and your car along about 11 o'clock every night . . ."

Nine times out of ten the man won't appreciate you telling him the facts in the first place. Too, there is the awful possibility of mistaken identity in such reporting.

Still, I'd like to go on record as saying that such reports on my son will be appreciated. I'd much rather be a trifle embarrassed than see the boy die in a flaming auto because his dad failed to steer him right in the art of driving.

The Town Crier

By GEORGE SPELVIN

There have been so many tales told about the Texans that have really been funny, I'm considering compiling them just to see how many of them I can get together. Of course, most of them relate to the great wealth of an individual Texan, and the oddball things that he does with his money.

Most recent one that I heard tells of the Texan who hopped into his Cadillac, started it up quickly and the car accidentally gets away from him, doing a great deal of damage to nine other cars . . . but fortunately he was still in his own garage!

Of course the stories about the disturbed, distraught people who feel overworked and are constantly ill at ease and jumpy, would fill a book.

The latest one is of the fellow who tells a friend that he has been feeling so terrible and nervous for several days that he couldn't even force himself to answer his telephone when it rang, so he decided to see a psychiatrist. His friend asked if the psychiatrist had been able to help him. The reply was: "He sure did! Now I answer the phone whether it rings or not!"

—pd—
The magazine section of many of the nation's leading Sunday newspapers last Sunday carried an article written by Tyrone Power, the motion picture star.

The article is entitled "Women Scare Me To Death." This struck me as at least a trifle funny in view of the fact that last Thursday Mr. Power took unto himself his third bride, and if she scares him she certainly doesn't scare me. A picture of her, the former Mrs. Deborah Minards, a divorcee from Tunica, Miss., shows her to be a most attractive, dark-haired beauty.

Apparently Mr. Power overcame his fears and fright quickly.

Have you been in the City News Stand in Lufkin lately?

Well, the next time you are in Lufkin drop in and take a good look at the 25c and 35c paperback books that are available. With the bad comes the good, for we grant that a lot of junk has been published in the pocket-size books. But, you'll find that the pocket book editions also offer many of the classics, increased numbers of the World's best modern writers in both fact and fiction fields.

You can start a really excellent library of pocket size books for your home, while spending just a few dollars.

In recent years pocket books have added many of the world's top playwrights, poets, economists, et cetera. Your quarters are well spent on these books.

FENLEY

Houston at the time of the crash. Constable Fenley told The News-Bulletin this week that Montgomery caught a ride from the scene of the accident to Diboll, where he employed a local man to drive him to Corrigan.

Fenley said the man called his wife in Houston, from a telephone in Essie's Cafe in Corrigan. Fenley learned of the call, reported it to the Sheriff's Department in Lufkin. The call was traced and Fenley and Deputy Jessa Ray Havard went to Houston and returned to Lufkin with the man late last Thursday night.

BULLETIN!

We have been notified that Mr. Arthur Temple, Jr. has approached the Lufkin City Council by way of letter to Mr. Harold Schmitzer questioning the soundness of their decision last Tuesday night when they granted the franchise to the Lufkin Vumore Company to establish and operate in Lufkin a community antenna television service.

Mr. Temple stated that he felt the best interests of the citizens of Lufkin were not served as he had submitted a proposal that would have granted the City of Lufkin 50 percent more revenue and at a much lower cost to the public.

Mr. Temple further stated that the theory that one group of people be forced to pay excessive rates to subsidize private corporation is hardly consistent with the line of thought that properly should be followed by the City Council elected to serve the citizens of Lufkin.

Mr. Temple has formally requested that a special meeting of the City Council be called in order to reconsider the matter.

LIVING WITHIN MEANS

Texas government should try to make spending fit income rather than vice versa, says a spokesman for the Retail Merchants Assn. of Texas.

Charles J. Lux of Austin, executive vice president of the Retail Merchants, said his organization is opposed to any new tax whether on sales, income or gross receipts.

He suggested the State Tax Study Commission and Texas Research League concentrate on finding ways to economize rather than hunting a new source of state revenue.

FIRST IN TEXAS

DALLAS — Texas kept a firm grip on one of its many "firsts" when the 1956 State Fair of Texas closed down with a total attendance of 2,672,252 during the two week run, 60,982 above the last year's attendance mark.

So this is HOMEMAKING

Excuse me for bowing, but you will understand when you hear the news. I am the owner of a paradox! My very first one too. Always wanted to find a paradox, but now that I've found one, I'm puzzled.

After a series of family conferences, my husband Bill, and I decided it was time to get a new washing machine. But instead of the machine, we got the paradox.

We both fell in love with an RCA Whirlpool washer-dryer combination, because even in the store it looked to be a familiar part of my kitchen. Of course that wasn't the only reason . . . it had all sorts of wonderful advantages. Like the 10 pound capacity, and all-utility, and automatic operation. "Put in the clothes, add detergent, click the dial, and call up your girl friend Marge." Bill commented, "since you have nothing else to do until the job is done."

The only thing we had to decide was whether we wanted an electric or a gas unit. We decided on gas, since we heat and cook with it and it seems to get things done in short order, and efficiently.

"Maybe now you'll be ready on time when we're going out," Bill mused, adding, "It'll be great not having you complain that you haven't enough time for anything." I didn't have the heart to hit him with a wet mop. Not when he'd just bought a new appliance. Things haven't turned out like we expected though. My wash gets done in record time, and sparkles magnificently. But I still don't have enough time. That's the paradox. Bill claims he knows why though. He says every washday, when he tries to call me up, the phone is busy! Well, Marge has an RCA Whirlpool too, and she is my best friend.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

News of your sewing clubs, church happenings, or other social events is needed for this page each week. Contact Beth at MY 8-5681 (same for office or home, day or night).

Hand in hand with the trend toward elegant simplicity in modern table-top fashions has come a growing preference for uncluttered patterns in flatware. Especially popular are the "stainless modern" designs that seem to provide the perfect compliment to the solid-toned china, unadorned glassware and soft colorings which keynote these pretty table settings of today. Stainless steel, being both lustrous and durable, has proved itself ideally suited to these clean-lined flatware designs, plus having the added virtue of never requiring polish.

Modern sets of quality American stainless steel flatware provide a lifetime of service-factory service. But fine stainless steel today has its imitations — and to avoid disappointment, it might be well to bear these few points in mind. There are many types of stainless steels, but American manufacturers have agreed that the higher alloy types are best for use in flatware. The U. S. customer can thus be assured the stainless pieces contain more than sufficient amounts of chromium or combinations of chromium and nickel. These assure that there will be the maximum resistance to rust, corrosion and pitting, and the flatware will have extra strength and resistance to even the harshest detergents.

Good stainless flatware should exhibit the work of fine craftsmanship even to the naked eye. Check the narrow side edges of each piece: They should be perfectly even, and finished to a lustrous smoothness. Another eye-test for good stainless flatware is to examine the niches between the tines of the forks. These should be smooth, well-defined and without any rough spots. Look also at the top edge of these pretty table settings of today. Stainless steel, being both lustrous and durable, has proved itself ideally suited to these clean-lined flatware designs, plus having the added virtue of never requiring polish.

The sheen of stainless flatware should show good polishing techniques. The best American stainless is available from a very bright mirror polish to the matte-like satin finish, and in a wide variety of patterns and shapes. The choice is strictly up to the buyer.

Good stainless doesn't have to be pampered. No matter how beautiful, it will withstand the hardest home wear and tear. Cleaning and "polishing" is done all at once with soap and water, and with equal success by hand or by dishwasher method. But thorough drying afterwards is the recommended procedure, particularly in hard water areas.

Easy Elegance

No need to sacrifice glamour for speed even in last-minute desserts these days. Coconut Cream Charlotte, for instance, is every bit as handsome and delicious as a dessert made with much more time and effort and calling for a dozen or more ingredients. The secret is to start with a package of coconut cream instant pudding — and imagination.

For this luscious dessert an attractive serving dish is lined with ladyfingers — then filled with rich coconut cream instant pudding and a puff of whipped cream, gaily topped with vari-colored sprinkles. It's a party dessert you can be proud to serve to any company, be it ever so important.

Add pudding mix and beat with egg beater 1 minute, or until well mixed. Let stand 2 minutes. Then fold in meringue, blending well. Line mold with ladyfingers. Pour pudding over the ladyfingers. Chill 2 hours before serving. Top with whipped cream and colored sprinkles. Makes 6 servings.

Yard Judging Due By Inspectors Today Inside City Limits

A four-man committee will decide today who has the most attractive yard in Diboll, and the lucky couple will be awarded a year's supply of water free from Diboll Water Company, sponsor of the event.

This is the second year that the contest has been held. Mr. and Mrs. Willie Trevathan won the contest last year.

J. D. Winder, manager of Diboll Water Company, said yesterday that last year's win by the Trevathans was most significant because their home had been in its location less than a year when the judging took place.

General attractiveness and amount of work that has gone into beautification of the yards will be considered.

Judges will be J. D. Winder, Tommy Ward Lanyon, Ben Anthony and Paul M. Durham.

Lumber Output For March 1958, Up 8% Above February

National production of lumber totaled 2,508,000,000 board feet during March 1958, according to estimates of the National Lumber Manufacturers Association. The March lumber output was eight percent above February 1958 but twelve percent below March 1957.

Total lumber shipments in March rose ten percent over February while new orders received by the mills were up six percent. Compared with the same month a year ago, March 1958 shipments were off nine percent and new orders were down 16 percent.

For the first three months of 1958, an estimated national production of 7,311,000,000 board feet of lumber was ten percent below the corresponding 1957 period. This was the lowest first-quarter lumber output recorded since 1949. Total shipments during the first three months of this year were about equal to production, while new orders have been one percent less than the output.

Unfilled orders for lumber declined two percent during March and at the end of the month were nine percent below year-ago levels. Gross mill stocks of lumber on March 31, 1958, totaled 9,494,000,000 board feet, about the same as at the end of February but five percent less than the year-ago level.

BRAVE WORDS

That's my daughter Ellen standing up there in her cap and gown. Valedictorian of her class! I'd be a strange mother if I didn't feel a lump in my throat, and a tremendous surge of pride.

It just doesn't seem possible that my Ellen is grown-up. Like any mother, I have visions of a tiny baby ... a little girl in pigtails ... a child, beginning school.

And now here she is, speaking about the future that she and her classmates envision ... the things that they are going to try to do ... their hopes and dreams.

They are brave words, all of them ... brave dreams. And like all parents, I pray that most of them will come true. But I know that in times of failure, my Ellen will have an added strength because of her Faith, and her devotion to the Church.

How glad, how thankful, I am for that!

THE CHURCH FOR ALL ... ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

A STITCH IN TIME

Thrifty farm families who can a good portion of their yearly produce will probably have best chances of survival if nuclear bombs ever should fall on Texas. These and other facts bearing on the key role of rural and small town citizens in civil defense were pointed up as Texans participated in the nationwide practice exercise, "Operation Alert."

For two days officials and representatives of agencies making up the State Civil Defense Council sat in the map-lined, bomb-proof Disaster Control Center in the Department of Public Safety building. Pretending five cities had been hit, they practiced coping with the gigantic problem that would arise — maintaining government, re-establishing transportation, communication and power facilities, providing food, shelter and medical attention for victims, escaping radioactive fallout.

Small towns and rural areas would serve as reception centers for evacuees from target cities.

Providing food is regarded as especially crucial. "If all transportation were knocked out, Texas would have only 14 days supply of food," says State Defense Coordinator William L. McGill. Garden plots and crops in the field might be ruined by fallout. Frozen foods might spoil for lack of electricity.

Hence, if worst comes to worst, a well-stocked pantry is seen as an ace in the hole.

STILL HERE

Texas business reports at the end of the first quarter, '58 show that the recession "is still very much with us."

University of Texas Bureau of Business Research said recovery is generally expected during the last quarter (October 1-December 31).

BBR tied Texas' troubles directly to the "massive drop in crude oil production," said recovery of the states economy hinges on restoring the oil industry to health.

Overall, the March, '58, business index was a modest 2 per cent below March '57. Bright spots were construction, up 17 per cent, and farm cash income, up 12 percent. Crude oil production was down 32 per cent.

FALSE ALARM

CONCORD, N. H. — A falling brick brought firemen running. A laborer dropped the brick from a second-story window, it hit a fire box and sounded a false alarm, bringing four fire trucks to the scene.

"SKY HOUSE" of New Orleans Architect William I. Ricciuti shows raised living area under sweep of tremendous open roof. Functional modern structure incorporates many features of the "old plantation home" through a full and thorough exploitation of light weight and great strength of Southern Pine structural members that comprise beams and roof decking. Siding is also of wood.

INVESTIGATE...

Compare Lumber Quality

TEXAS GROWN

Before you buy, build, remodel, or repair ... be certain that the lumber used is of high and serviceable quality. Since the enduring value of a home depends upon the lumber with which it is built, the home owner will do well to take every precaution to see that he is getting what he has a right to expect. Examine the lumber which goes into your home before you buy. Is it dry? Is it standard thickness and width? Is it in a government approved grade for the use to which it is being put? Is it of a good, strong, nail-holding species ... like Texas Grown, KILN DRIED, SPIB Grade-Marked Southern Yellow Pine? Compare the "feel" of this fine lumber with that of other kinds. Notice the beautiful grain and smooth texture. Feel the density and weight. Look for the grade-mark on the end of each board.

Survey Reveals Lumber Most Economical Material

In analyzing results of a national survey conducted among tract builders in six major areas of the United States, the National Lumber Manufacturers Association makes this observation:

"Several builders mentioned specifically (and most of the remainder acknowledged by their choice of materials) that, at present, lumber built the most economical as well as satisfactory framework for a house."

However, this consistent criticism also was noted:

"The industry should develop lumber with greater dimensional stability through a reduction in delivery moisture content... There should be a standardization of lumber sizes throughout the industry." The investigation was conducted by two men of the Timber Engineering Company Research Laboratory through a personal field survey of several weeks duration.

Typical builder comment, by areas, is as follows, according to the NLMA report:
Long Island (Suburban New York City) and New Jersey (Suburban Philadelphia) Area:

"The majority of the builders felt that one of the basic disadvantages with wood was its dimensional instability coupled with the problem of moisture transfer and maintenance costs associated with painted wood exterior surfaces. These factors were felt to be major reasons for the fairly widespread popularity of certain substitute materials."

"Several of the builders felt that the lumber industry had 'slipped badly' in shipping a great deal of lumber that was excessive and of extreme range in moisture content. Further, excessive amounts were not within the specified grade."

Detroit and Flint, Michigan, and South Bend and Fort Wayne, Indiana, Area:

"The greatest disadvantage with lumber is the dimensional instability with regard to moisture content change."

Houston and Dallas, Texas Area:

"The lumber industry should grade-mark and identify by species all lumber items to eliminate confusion. Also, the industry should standardize more completely so that the variation in quality of lumber shipped to a specific grade from different mills would not be subject to the extreme range that actually exists."

"The industry should reduce the dimensional instability of lumber due to moisture content changes and improve the long-term paint holding characteristics of wood."

Los Angeles and San Francisco, California, Area:

"The lumber industry should provide a product with greater dimensional stability under moisture content changes."

As these reports indicate, the builders interviewed expressed an awareness of good construction practices and an eagerness to see them generally observed. Their observations on moisture content, for example, were in line with the authoritative advice of the U. S. Forest Products Laboratory that it is "vitally important" to use properly seasoned lumber in home building.

The principle has gained such wide recognition among lumbermen in the Southern Pine region that it is now a mandatory grading standard.

Specific moisture content restrictions for light framing lumber are imposed by the Southern Pine industry's standard grading rules. Hence, when Southern Pine is grade-marked, the user is thereby assured that the lumber is properly seasoned. However, it is the only major structural species with such a safeguard.

who catch these baseballs then have them sent to Runnels via Arthur Temple Jr. Pete in turn gets the balls autographed by some of baseball's greats from both major leagues. This is a fine gesture, which is appreciated not only by the lucky recipients of the opening season balls, but by local fans in general.

Pete Runnels isn't exactly a stranger to Diboll anyway. After his discharge from the Marine Corps in the late 40's he played about a dozen games with the Diboll Millers, then traveled to The Houston Post Tournament with the Livingston Cardinals and several Diboll standouts.

Incidentally, Pete came out of the Marine Corps with an unbelievable .575 batting average with the service team.

Pete Runnels won't be able to attend any of our Little League games, but he'll be rooting for every one of this nation's little leaguers... the same as we'll be rooting for him to best the great Ted Williams in the batting average columns for 1958!

Texas in the years ahead will realize its full industrial potential that will bring thousands of new jobs in such industries as chemical, automobile, aluminum, and housing, W. W. Lynch, president of Texas Power & Light Company told the Conference on Texas Friday at Austin.

The Conference was held to celebrate the 75th anniversary of the University of Texas and featured talks on the future of natural, human and cultural resources of Texas.

Mr. Lynch said the time has come when much industry falls into the hands of those who reach for it and industrial development will be open to the competition of those who want it and make long-range plans to induce it to their area.

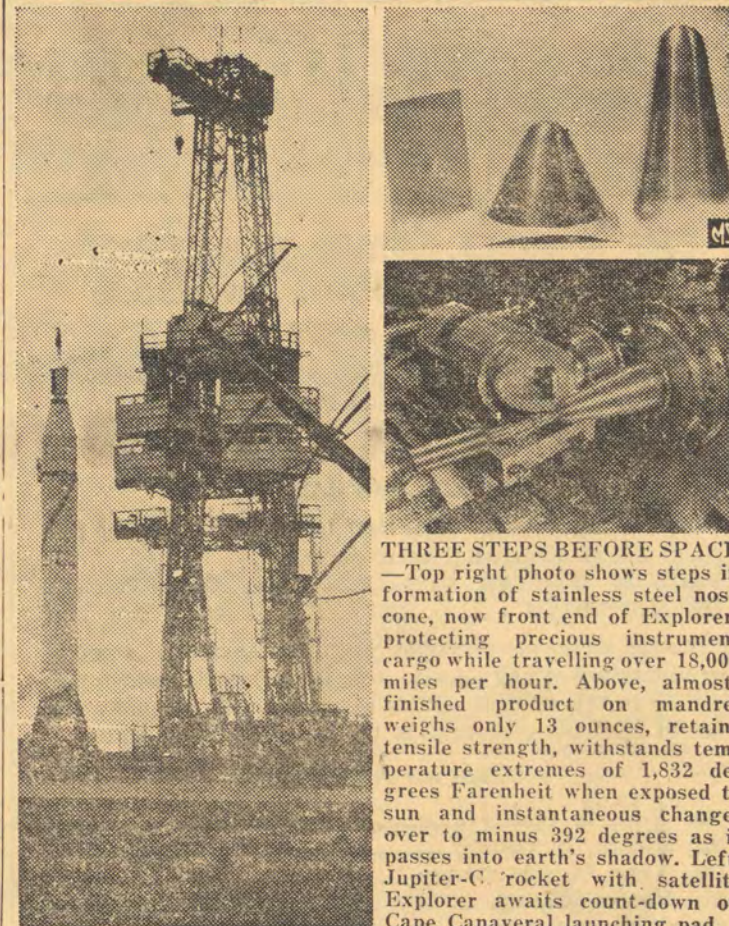

"Because of the great volume of raw materials produced in Texas, there will doubtless continue to be a large export of raw and semi-processed materials, but there will, nevertheless, be a steady increase in the volume of processing done in Texas," Mr. Lynch said. He added this is an important factor contributing to the potential industrial development of the state.

The speaker said one of the most encouraging signs of future industrial development is in the fact that Texas capital, in a larger degree than ever before, is going into Texas' industrial development.

Mr. Lynch said some of the things the planners are predicting for the future are: a large potential labor supply; a Texas personal income of $25 billion dollars by 1975; a Texas population of 12 million by 1975; a bright chemical industry picture with Texas accounting for 11 per cent of the nation's total production in 1975, compared to 8 per cent in 1955.

Planners also predict, he said, that Texas will have nearly 21 per cent of the nation's total aluminum production in the near future; that 22,000 people will produce 500,000 motor vehicles annually by 1975, compared to now; that 90,000 non-farm homes will be constructed in Texas annually by 1975, compared to 63,000 today; and that electric power capacity in Texas will triple by 1975.

Mr. Lynch warned, however, to accomplish these things Texans must conserve their water supply.

"There falls on the surface of Texas, in an average year, enough water to support a far greater population and a far greater volume of industry than at present," he noted. "Not less than forty million acre-feet of water go unused into the Gulf annually. But the rainfall is irregular, and thereby arises a problem. We must conserve the supply from the wet years for use during the dry year and hold as much water upstream as practicable."

He added that this is necessary because authorities predict an increase in demand for water of 70 per cent to 80 per cent by 1975.
